Department of English and American Studies

Schedule for Orientation Week

September 19-23, 2016

There is no teaching in the Department during this first week of the semester (orientation week) except for the intensive courses AJ14151/AJ24254: "New Technologies and Modernist Literature" and AJ69074: "Special Topics in Translation: Translation into English", which will take place as scheduled.

This means that all day studies [prezenční] courses in the Department will begin teaching during the week of September 26, 2016 (all courses taught on each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday and those courses taught only during odd-numbered [liché] weeks) or the week of October 3, 2016 (courses taught only during even-numbered [sudé] weeks).

Combined studies courses for Bachelor's degree students and most Master's degree students begin on Friday, October 7 and are taught in odd-numbered [liché] weeks. Those combined studies students in the Master's degree in Teaching English Language and Literature for Secondary Schools have compulsory courses pedagogy and psychology in even-numbered weeks, Friday, September 30.

During Orientation Week, orientation sessions will be held for all students beginning their Bachelor's or Master's degree studies in the Department. It is important for all Master's degree students, including those who began their studies during the 2016 Spring Semester to attend orientation sessions even if you have studied in the Department before.
